Purim Observance Saturday, March 7

The loyalty of a Jewish woman to her people will be commemorated by Jews all over the world when they observe Purim, the Feast of Lots, which this year begins at sundown Saturday, March 7. During this one day festival the Book of Esther is read in the Synagogue and the Jewish people rejoice as they remember that centuries ago on this day their fathers were delivered from persecution.

The story of Purim had its origin in ancient Persia four centuries before the Common Era. Tradition says that King Ahasuerus of Persia deposed his wife Vashti because she was disobedient and married Esther, a beautiful Jewish girl, who was the cousin of Mordecai, an influential man in the kingdom.

The king had appointed his favorite general, Haman, to the position of prime minister. A bitter enemy of the Jewish people, Haman particularly disliked Mordecai and because he had a quarrel with him as an individual, he hated and plotted to kill all the Jews.

He went to King Ahasuerus with distorted tales about the Jews. He portrayed them as a deadly menace; he insisted that they must be eradicated from the kingdom; and in the end he obtained the king's acquiescence to his plan.

Haman cast lots to select the day for the Jewish massacre, hence the name of the festival. He issued an edict under the king's seal "to destroy utterly all Jews, both young and old, and to take the spoil of them for a prey."

Ahast, Mordecai hurried to Queen Esther and implored her to intercede on behalf of her people. Esther had not revealed her religion. For a moment she hesitated to seek a private audience with the king, for anyone who approached him without being called, was put to death unless he held out to them his golden sceptre, as the symbol of his forgiveness.

However, Mordecai, sensing the imperative need of his people, spoke to the queen in phrases which have been immortalized in the Bible. "Think not within thyself that thou shalt escape, in the king's house, any more than all the Jews. For if thou holdest thy peace at this time, relief and deliverance will arise to the Jews from another place, but thou and thy father's house will perish; and who knoweth whether thou art not come to royal estate for just such a time as this?"

Esther was persuaded, and went to the king who held out the golden sceptre to her. She invited him to a banquet and at the feast she told him of Haman's duplicity, of his plan to kill all Jews who would include herself and begged the king to save her people from destruction.

Horried and angered the king ordered Haman to be hanged on the same gibbet that he had prepared for Mordecai. Under the laws of the Medes and Persians a royal order could not be revoked but Ahasuerus issued a second edict which gave the Jews the right to arm themselves and "to stand for their lives against all that would assault them."

In commemoration the Jewish people give thanks and join in gay celebrations on this festival. Gifts are given to the poor, Purim gifts in memory of Queen Esther are presented, caravans are held, and all Israel rejoice. — Notice prepared by the Tract Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and Union of American Hebrew Congregations, Merchants Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Christian Endeavor
NEWS

You Have a Date.

The boys and their girl friends, or since it is leap year, the girls and their boy friends, are wanted at the County Union leap year party in the Ponckhockie Congregational Church on Friday evening, February 28, at eight o'clock. All Endeavorers and young people interested in the Christian Youth Movement are cordially invited to attend. The county officers are expecting a "rush" at the door Friday night.

Suggestions for Meetings.

Following are a few helpful suggestions for interesting meetings:

Fire-side Meeting.—Should be conducted in an informal manner with all lights out, before an open fire. If additional lights are needed, candles should be used. Chairs are to be grouped informally before the hearth. Ideal for small groups or discussions.

Hymn Sing.—Try a night of old and new hymns. Have someone tell the story of the hymn, or give a short biography of the author. Read an appropriate hymn for the scripture.

Musicales.—Try a service of special music. Ask the church choir to aid you; invite the church members to attend.

Candlelight Service.—Conduct an entire meeting with candles as the only source of light. Sing hymns from memory and have scripture given from memory, too.

Study Nights.—Have someone conduct a series of ten minute Bible or mission studies. Religious books can also be studied. Ask the minister to help with this service.

Radio Program.—Two teams are selected, and the room arranged as a broadcasting studio. Judges are selected and pick the team which presents the best "Broadcast" on the topic.

Exchange Meeting.—Arrange with another society for an exchange of leaders. Invite another society to visit you, or have your group visit another society. Tell other societies about your successful meetings; this can be done through the medium of this column.

Blue Canopy Meeting.—An outdoor meeting. Select a good spot that has many of the beauties of nature. Use your best leader and a topic relating to nature. In the evening a campfire may be used to good advantage.

Week Day Meeting.—Some societies have found that they get along better by holding their regular prayer meetings on a week-night. After the regular service, a social is held.

Missionary Meetings.—Have the room decorated to represent the country studied. Have short talks on the geography, history and customs of the country. Use a large map if possible. If there is a former missionary in your vicinity, invite him to speak. Send to your state denominational board for literature.

The Emotion of Anger.—Sunday evening, the Comforter Christian Endeavor had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. John Heidenreich of the Congregational Church give an address on the "Emotion of Anger." Mr. Heidenreich pointed out that most of the time this emotion is misguiding in that it is directed at some individual and assumes the attitude of hate. He said that anger is a God-given emotion that has its purpose in that it can be directed against some unchristian conduct. The wrath or anger that was aroused in Abraham Lincoln when, as a young man, he visited the slave market in New Orleans and saw the colored folks herded and sold as cattle, was cited as an example of the correct use of the emotion of anger.

This week should mean a "big week" financially to the Comforters as on Thursday night in their own hall they will present their second annual play, "The Wild Oats Boy." Proceeds will be used in supporting the financial program of the church.

Fire-side Meeting

The First Reformed Church of Kingston held another very successful fire-side meeting at the parsonage, under the guidance of the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool. The high light was a talk by Samuel Cheng of Nanking, China. Mr. Cheng is attending school in this country at the present time, having come over here about two years ago. He gave an exceptionally interesting talk on his personal religious experiences and was well received by all those present.

The roller-skating social that the Reformers held last Friday evening was reported by one of their attending members as a "dandy time." The members, assembled at the church and then went out to the skating rink, returning to the church rooms for refreshments and games at the close of the evening.

New Group at Bethany Chapel

A new organization of young people is to be formed at the Bethany Chapel on Wednesday evening, February 26. The minimum age limit will be 20 years. They meet once a month and will also hold what is known as a "20 year ceremony" some time in August.

The regular monthly meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor will be held in the chapel on Saturday afternoon at 5:15. The members are requested to turn in their Valentine mite boxes, and come prepared to work on the cutting of patches and making of scrapbooks for shipment to China.

The annual "Sweetheart's Party" was a decided success, about 40 young people attending. The dance was held in the Gerlach barn on the Sawkill road with Mr. Gerlach furnishing the music. Misses Pearl and Evelyn Howard were in charge of the entertainment.

Holding Meetings

Many of the societies do not appear often in this column because they claim they are not doing "anything special—just holding regular meetings." Is this not an achievement in itself, when there are many societies that cannot even hold regular meetings? Perhaps with a wee bit more effort they will be able to do that "special something" that other Endeavors are doing. It may be that Miss Langwick, the County Union president, can help them plan activities, or direct them to the proper source for information. Letters should be addressed to her at New Paltz, N. Y. The County Union is primarily to help the individual organizations, and they are asked to give it a trial.

GASOLINE FILLING STATION REPLACES SLAVES' HAVEN

Cincinnati (AP)—A famous Ohio gateway to freedom for slaves of Civil War days has yielded to the march of progress.

A gasoline filling station is under construction where a three-story brick building, once a depot for the "underground railroad," stood for 100 years.

In the west foundation wall of the old structure, and in the foundations of buildings for three blocks to the west, indications were found of a reworked passage five feet high and four feet wide. The passage connected with another running north and south.

The tunnels, built by slaves, furnished a haven for negroes who managed to cross the Ohio river.

Mormonism's Most Significant Landmark

Transformed from a barren, nameless hill to a spot of historic interest near Palmyra in western New York, "Cumorah" has come to be Mormonism's most significant landmark in the east. Here it was that Joseph Smith found the ancient record which he translated as the "Book of Mormon" and published on a hand-press one hundred and six years ago this month.

The old hill now has a modern adornment. It was acquired some years ago by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and because of its importance in the church's history it is now a major tourist attraction. In July, 1935, a monument was erected on its summit representing an angel, Moroni, who is credited with having delivered the tablets of the Book of Mormon to Joseph Smith. Interested travelers now inquire about Mormonism as they examine the memorial, and study the spot on the hillside where the golden records once lay hidden.

The position of the hill on the very edge of New York Highway 21 makes it a cynosure to thousands of passing travelers. A large sign-board catches the eye of the motorists, and a large percentage of drivers stop to read its explanation: "The Hill Cumorah."

"In this hill many centuries ago were hidden golden plates upon which the sacred records of ancient inhabitants of America were engraved. On September 22, 1827, these sacred records were delivered by the Angel Moroni, the last Nephite prophet to write upon them, to Joseph Smith, by whom they were translated into the English language by the gift and power of God. This property is owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Visitors are welcome."

Cumorah Hill, now marked as an important spot in Mormon history, has come to be a shrine, drawing visitors from all over the world, and the scene for an annual gathering of Latter-day Saints throughout the east each July. This gathering commemorates the origin of the Book of Mormon, which they regard as an authentic religious history of the civilizations in ancient America.

A Diatribe on Man's Inalienable Privilege

The ladies, the big sisters, have done their darndest to steal our pants—Agoratively speaking, of course. They swank about on beach and boards in something they call pajamas. They encroach on our ski breeches; they log up on the old grey mare in our horse pants; and we had hardly discovered the comfort of tennis and beach shorts before they snatched the idea for themselves. Now they're all hot and bothered over pirate-like pants they call culottes, whatever they may be. Okay—let 'em have them. They'll never look like what we, in our urbanity, call trousers. And that goes for you, too, Marlene! Getting down to the seat or rather the legs of the subject, it should be a matter of masculine pride to give scrupulous attention to these last vestiges of masculinity, so that a pair of trousers of sea-going proportions will not inspire a hand to strike up "Here Comes a Sailor," or "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," because of a calf and thigh-bugging effect, reminiscent of some muscle-bound gymnast.

We would not minimize by one jot or iota the importance of perfection of detail in jacket or waistcoat. But we decry vigorously the tendency to concentrate all attention on the aforementioned.

STYLES FOR THE GAY SPORTSMEN

Sportsmen will be truly gay blades if they wear the costumes decreed by designers for 1936. For example, see the ensembles above, exhibited in New York: (left) for seashore a green jacket with orange plaid, pleated in back, and gray and green striped trousers; and for all-around wear (right) a coat in district check, tan doeskin trousers, and buff suede shoes. FUN WITH NUMEROLOGY

LEARN MEANING OF YOUR NAME, AND HIS

When Bert dropped in to see Anne the other evening, he found her scribbling away on her little brother Jimmie's blackboard:

"Back to your school days?" he inquired, but soon he had a piece of chalk too, and was helping Anne chalk up names and analyze them by numerology.

"Let's really go into this right," he said, and wrote "Bert Jones" on the blackboard.

"Just a minute, that's going into the wrong," Anne explained. "You have to use the name given you when you were christened, not a nickname like 'Bert'."

So Bert, with a groan, wrote "Hubert Jones," and above it "Anne Yates."

"Now we give each letter a numerical value, according to the table in the book," he grinned. "And then we do some easy adding, and find that I'm a 'One' and you're a 'Three.' Let's see what it all means."

And he read from Anne's fascinating little book: "More famous people have been influenced by the 'One' vibration than by any other."

After a few remarks about his numerical value, according to the table in the book, he said, "You're a 'Three' vibration, and he reads, 'You are that rare person who can say biting things without leaving a toothmark. Your easy social manner makes a fine impression. Your personality is a real asset, but you are prone to dissipate your powers. Choose a mate among the Ones, Threes, Sixes or Nines.'"

1. No empty gesture is this sketch of a well-cut and proportioned pair of trousers. We call attention to the avoidance of any hippy-looking peg tops, and the lack of any sailor-like, bell-bottom effect of the kind glorified in mail order catalogues. Dependent upon the proportions of the wearer, the correct knee width is 22 inches to 24 inches, with the bottoms in ratio from 19 inches to 20 inches.

2. Holder-uppers, whether you call them suspenders, braces or call-boys, are essential to properly hung trousers. Some cautious individuals may wear both suspenders and belt. We recommend the belt, however, for wear with cum trousers and slacks, when these latter are cut to proper length, eliminating the need for suspenders.

3. Modern contribution to a smooth-looking trouser-fly is that stream-lined hook and eye, the Tal-on-fastener, used in place of buttons.

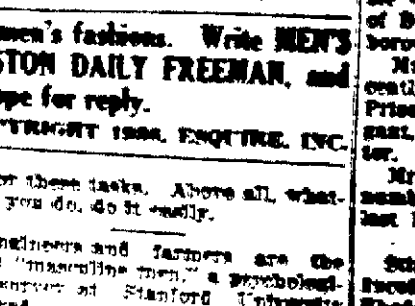

4. An unpleasant and incorrect condition of trousers that are either cut too long or are badly in need of suspender adjustment.

5. The correct length and most pleasing appearance of the average ruffled trouser for daily wear. We call attention to the slight break just above the cuff, over the instep.

6. The practical, smart and desirable appearance for slacks or sport trousers—somewhat shorter with a natural roll look to the cuff.

Reservoir Country Twenty Years Ago

Shoken, Feb. 23.—The Traver Hollow bridge, one of the Ashokan country's most widely known attractions, was in general use 20 years ago as a unit of the substituted highway system constructed by New York city in connection with the building of the reservoir. This great bridge, crossing the famous Traver Hollow trout brook at a height of more than 100 feet above the bed of the stream, was one of six reinforced concrete structures erected by the Harrison & Burton Co. under Board of Water Supply contract No. 49. It is 500 feet long and has a span of 200 feet to its three-hinged arch which consists of two I-shaped ribs, reinforced with steel shapes built in the form of double-intersection Warren trusses. The hinges were made of cast-steel with bronze hinge-pins protected against oxidation by a concrete covering.

1910 Activities

The B. W. S. engineers as early as 1910 commenced the work of making designs, contract drawings and specifications for the Ashokan bridges, of which five are near the upper end of the west basin and five in the vicinity of the east basin and main dam. Their studies of stresses created in arches by the weight of solid soffits and earth-filled spandrels over the crown demonstrated the desirability of minimizing these dead loads, and this result was accomplished by reducing the depth of the cornice and bringing the deck and arches closer together. The engineers at this time designed two standard balustrades for short and long span bridges respectively, and also determined roadway areas under the bridges, being aided in the latter studies by the high-water marks left by the great freshet of April 26, 1910. The bridge experts, in connection with the Traver Hollow structure, engaged in exhaustive study upon methods of construction, upon a system of away bracing between the ribs, and upon economic concrete columns of the necessarily great height for supporting the bridge floor. The abutments and approaches, it was decided, would be founded upon compact drift.

Bracing System

A system of lateral bracing between the two ribs was finally adopted, consisting of reinforced concrete diaphragms at the crown and adjacent to the abutments, and diagonal struts at intermediate points. For the roadway floor of the bridge it was decided to lay a reinforced concrete slab, supported and divided into squares by cross and longitudinal floor beams designed to act together to carry concentrated loads more advantageously. Over the main arch this system of beams would allow a slight economy of materials, diminish the load, permit the reduction of the main arch ribs from a maximum depth of eight and a half feet to seven feet and result in a better shaped arch. At the bridge site, in 1911, a concreting plant comprising one jaw crusher and one half-yard mixer, with storage bins for materials and a cableway of 650-foot span was set up. Excavation was carried on by hand in a heavy glacial till of clay, sand and stones cemented together in a compact mass. Materials for concrete were obtained locally, the stone from old field walls near the work and the sand from the bed of the Esopus creek a short distance away. The mixture for the abutments and piers were placed directly by the cableway.

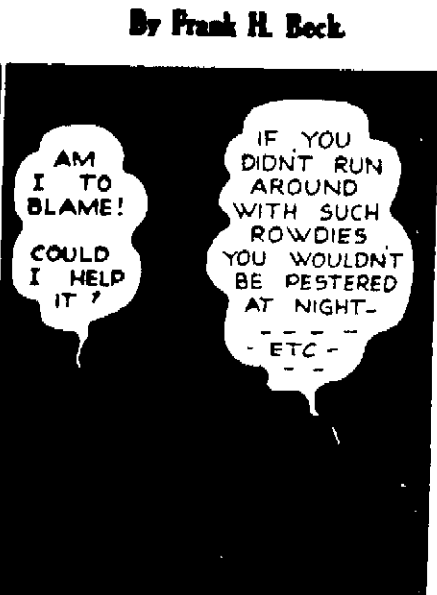

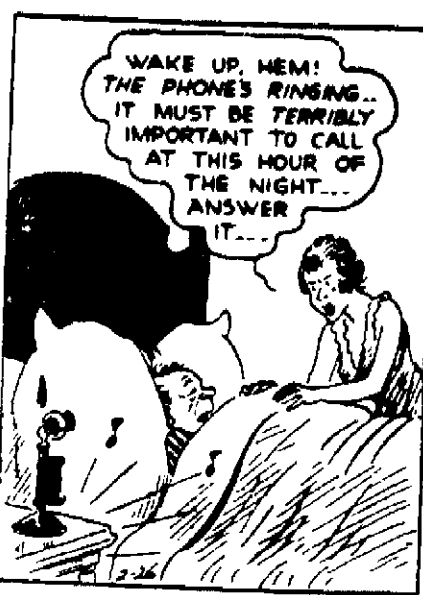

Plant Used

The plant, as used on the bridge job during 1912, consisted chiefly of the one cableway of three tons capacity, operated by a 45 H. P. engine; one crusher; one three-quarter yard mixer with 75 H. P. boiler, and one compressor with a 16 H. P. boiler to supply air for pneumatic tools used in dressing concrete. At the beginning of the year, the main abutments and some of the piers being in place, a falsework of the timber trestle type, with a maximum height of 105 feet, was erected by a large force of men, many of whom were local residents having a working knowledge of carpentry. A mixture of one part cement, two parts fine and four parts coarse aggregate, by volume, was used for the reinforced concrete. The arch ribs were cast in sections, the concrete load being applied to the forms first at the haunches, secondly at the crown and finally in the intermediate portions, loading the centering symmetrically. These separate sections were of such size as not to exceed a reasonable day's work and the method of applying the load resulted in a minimum distortion of the forms. The settlement of the forms at the crown of the arch due to placing the concrete amounted to only three-quarter inch.

Concrete Deposits

The concrete was run out on the cableway and deposited directly in place in batches of about one-half cubic yard. After the final arch concrete had been in place 21 days the centers were struck, resulting in a further settlement of one-quarter inch at the crown. There was also some settlement observed subsequent to lowering the forms, due to temperature contraction. There was, in fact, at the end of the year, an indicated total lowering of one and three-quarters inches from the elevation at which the forms were set. In making the balustrade of the bridge the materials were mixed comparatively dry by hand and cast in castron molds. The forms were immediately struck and the surface of the concrete washed with a fine spray of water to reveal the aggregate. The finished blocks were subsequently dipped in a solution of hydrochloric acid and immediately washed with clean water. At the end of the year 1912, the main arch span having been cast, the approaches completed with the exception of paving, and a section of the floor system about 56 feet long constructed, a portion of the visible concrete surface was too dressed with pneumatic bush hammers.

Consistency of Concrete

The concrete used generally in the construction of the Traver Hollow bridge consisted of one part of cement, 2 of sand and 4 of stone. The first batches used in columns, floor beams and other members containing much steel had but 3 parts of stone. After the falsework over the arch was built, the cableway was removed. In February, 1913, to the bridge being built across the Esopus creek at Boiceville, and delivery of materials was made in cars running directly from the mixer. The structure throughout was provided with expansion joints, and a record of the movements due to temperature changes was kept. The intermediate joints of the main span showed little or no movement, maximum of .001 inch being found in the floor joints on the arch side of the main columns where the greatest movement observed was 3-14 inch. A range in temperature from 10 degrees F. above zero on February 25 to 92 degrees F. on July 2 caused the crown of the arch to rise 1 1/4 inches. The exposed surface of the bridge, except the balustrade, ends of brackets and raised margins of panels, were bush-hammered with compressed air tools, the ends and margins being smoothed by rubbing.

Movement of Equipment

The contractors, being engaged upon construction simultaneously of several bridges in the same sector of the reservoir country, were able to move equipment from one point to another as the work on the structures progressed. They employed in the execution of their several jobs a maximum of 105 men and 20 animals. No general camp was established as was done in the case of other phases of reservoir construction work as most of the employees resided in this vicinity. A few of the laborers lived in houses on city property and obtained water from inspected springs and wells. Materials used in the several bridges included $33,589 pounds of iron, 45,000 square feet of concrete surface finish and 4,780 cubic yards of reinforced concrete. Bridges other than the Traver Hollow were the Boiceville spanning the railroad, the Esopus, crossing the creek; two Bushkill, and the Olive which was exactly like the Boiceville. The Traver Hollow is undoubtedly the most imposing of the 16 architecturally beautiful bridges built by New York city in the Ashokan Reservoir country; it is most impressive as viewed from its roadway and the brook far below, and from the north boulevard at the point of entering the Catskill forest. As a favorite postcard selection by tourists it ranks with the great main dam and a view of the east basin and dividing weir bridge, while few motorists in crossing the great structure for the first time can resist the urge to leave their car and peer over the balustrade down into the wooded depths where the sparkling Traver Hollow brook, springing from the Wittenbergs far to the west, pursues its course to the Ashokan, or "place to fish."

REMEMBRANCE
There breathes no soul that God has made
But hath some touch of grace,
And blessed tears pour time hath wet:
The wisest face.

Hard as the mether stone with which
The fates remorseless grind,
No trust in God or his fellow men,
Or faith in womankind.

Nothing to him the blushing flowers
Or the melodious birds of spring,
No more it stirs his withered heart,
To hear the thrush sing.

But when June breathes her gentle breath
And the tulips are aglow,
He lays a flower upon the grave
Of a lass that sleeps below.

ALAN JACKENIE

Just about the busiest thing on earth is an idle rumor.

Visitor—If you mother gave you two apples and told you to give one to your brother would you give him the little apple or the big one?

Junior—Do you mean my little brother or my big one?

One of the worst overworked subjects in both the press and pulp is man's eagerness for money. As a matter of fact most men are not eager enough to make money. More and more do they come to the conclusion to do without practically everything, unless somebody will give it to them.

The Lawyer—You're asking pretty stiff alimony merely because your husband neglected you for his business. Think he can dig it up?

The Client—Of course, he can. By attending to business he has made money, and by neglecting me he has saved it.

True Worth!
True worth is in being, not seeming. In doing each day that goes by some little good, not in dreaming of great things to do by-and-by. For whatever men say in blindness.

And in spite of the fancies of youth there's nothing so kindly as kindness. And nothing so royal as truth.

Memo from an Executive to His Employees: "Work hard and put in your solid eight hours a day and you won't have anything to worry about. Then, some day, you may be the boss and work 16 hours a day and have everything to worry about."

Employer—Can you come to work tomorrow?

Unemployed—No, you see I'm marching in a parade of the unemployed.

We refuse to get excited about all these predictions. If the world is really going to the dogs, that's something for the dogs to worry about.

The telegraph editor of a Denver, Colo., newspaper complained to a country correspondent who omitted names in his stories. He wrote the editor that if he neglected this essential detail in his next story he would be discharged. A few days later the editor got this dispatch:

Como, Colorado, June 8.—A severe storm passed over this section this afternoon and lightning struck a barbed-wire fence on the ranch of Henry Wilson, killing three cows, their names being, Jessie, Bossie, and Buttercup.

Helen—According to statistics women live longer than men. I wonder why that is?

Jerry—That's easily explained. Science says paint is a great preserver.

A farmer in the middle west has a cow who gets the hiccoughs every morning... and churns her own butter.

Friend—Was your landlord put out when you asked him to trust you for another month?

Man—No, indeed. I was.

Fals!
"What do you do to earn your cake?"

"Me! I sell salt," says Honest Jake.

"And what do you do when you're awake?"

"I'm a salt-seller too, by Gosh! Let's shake."

Occasionally Dad gets his dander up, but Mother's got more dander than Dad and usually gets hers up first.

Youth—If I should squeeze you would you squeal?

Sweet Young Thing—What do you take me for? Do you think I'm a doll?

Our idea of a good cure for insomnia is to go to bed and sleep it off.

Our idea of a good job for an unemployed ventriloquist, is to sell parrots.

Jimson Weed Not a Native
Oddly enough, the evil smelling and poisonous jimson weed is of Asiatic origin although its present name is American. It was known as the Jamestown weed because of its prevalence in the region of that colony and this name was later corrupted to Jimson. Jimson weed is a member of the datura family from the leaves of which the drug stramonium is derived.

CRUEL?—NO, JUST HEALTHY

Indignant women called police when they saw Ivan Drift, half Sioux Indian, strolling about Washington with his nude five-month-old daughter but he was untroubled. He's shown placing the child in the snow so he could explain in his leisurely way that the snow bath was a health stunt. (Associated Press Photo)

Since studies show that early hatched chicks pay best, poultrymen may be interested in Cornell bulletin E-205 which tells why some eggs do not hatch. Single copies may be had from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

About one-half of the soybeans harvested last year are expected to be used in the manufacture of such industrial and food products as flour, soy sauce, diabetic and infant foods, lard and butter substitutes, candies, varnish, printing inks and glue.

Smoke Telegraph
Among slight signals some of the earliest and most widely employed for communication by day were based on the rising of smoke. Since man alone of all animals, uses fire, the appearance of smoke was always accepted by primitive man as evidence of the presence of another human being. If not self-explanatory a column of smoke signified the danger of a potential enemy. If, however, the smoke was seen in some particular place, or appeared in some particular manner it was a symbol of friendship and through the use of a prearranged code could be used for communication. By alternately covering a smoldering fire with a blanket and uncovering it, the North American Indian broke the steady column of smoke, which rose from it, up into a series of puffs or clouds the sequence or combinations of which could be used, according to prearrangement, to "telegraph" from place to place, either directly or by the use of relays.

Tomorrow
Kingston: "The Calling of Dan Matthews" and "Two in the Dark."

Harold Bell Wright's rigorous novel of a man who went through almost every difficulty a human can experience in order to win his cause is brought to the Kingston screen as one of the double features on the Thursday and Friday program. Richard Arlen will be seen in the starring role. "Two in the Dark" is one of the best of the current "quicksie" dramas as it tells about Walter Abel, an amnesia victim, who finds himself tangled up in a murder without even knowing who he is or what he is doing. It creates lively and entertaining drama and is well worth enjoying. Margot Grahame is also in the cast as the actress who helps solve his dilemma.

At The Theatres

Today

Broadway: "Claw and Fang." Frank Buck, who goes into the wild places of the earth and photographs the dangers therein, offers another man versus beast exploration party which is all recorded for the camera, canned into film, and then brought back to civilization for the express purpose of giving its audience thrills and the mystery of jungle life. And it attains that end in a big way. Those who enjoyed the other Frank Buck picture journeys will find this one equally effective. There is so much new material in this talkie that it is something to see in order to fully appreciate. Added features on the program include a Viceroy Mouse cartoon, the March of Time and the Voice of Experience.

Kingston: "Murder of Dr. Harbigan" and "I Conquer the Sea." Mignon G. Eberhart's exciting mystery novel loses some of its appeal when brought to the screen through technicalities but it proves to be mystifying, shocking and dramatic the same. Most of the action is laid in a hospital and there are several glaring movie boners in the show that should please those who like to watch for flaws in a talkie production. Ricardo Cortez, Kay Linaker, Mary Treen and Mary Astor are in the cast. "I Conquer the Sea" is the other attraction with Steffi Duna.

Opheum: "Shanghai" and "Kid Courageous." Real mystery surrounds the visit of Charlie Chan to China for an effort is made to kill him as soon as he arrives and there is another dinner table murder that sends Chan through one of the most complicated detective searches in his career. It is fast moving melodrama, one of the best of the Charlie Chan mystery pictures, and is well worth enjoying. "Kid Courageous" is the other attraction with Bob Steele.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Dave Matthews, a story editor, offers these suggestions on scenarios-not-to-write:

1—Stories about "spirit transfers" in which a man becomes imbued with the soul of a horse, dog, tiger, African ant-eater, etc.

2—Romances in which the lovers discover, in the last reel, that they are really brother and sister.

3—Sports epics in which the winning touchdown (home run, goal, upset, etc.) is put across in the last minute of play.

4—Stories for Joe E. Brown in which the wide-mouthed one is to portray a hoofer.

Matthews says the majority of screen stories submitted by would-be scenarists deal with one of these themes, and might as well not be offered—except if, as is rarely true, they stand a chance of being read.

The "casting" of Joe E. Brown as a hog-caller began soon after the comedian's over-sized mouth was first exploited. Countless amateur film writers' hit upon hog-calling as Joe E. a screen calling.

Matthews gets the Brown "storia" because he is story editor at this star's studio (Warner Bros.), but the other "ideas" go equally to other studios, representing a cross section of what the amateur scenarist thinks the Hollywood movie factories want.

Except for No. 2 (brother-sister romance) and No. 4 (Brown as hog-caller) Hollywood has wanted those ideas—in the past. Touchdowns are still being made in the last minute.

But nowadays they are likely to be made by the hero's opponent and more likely not to be made at all.

Red Flannel Days
Red flannels may be outmoded, but long woolen underwear has its uses, even in sunny Hollywood.

When Hollywood goes on location in the mountains these crisp winter days, the long wool is in order. Margaret Sullivan, Henry Fonda, Director William S. Heller and others of "The Moon's Our Home" company did some quick shopping before departing for a Northern California location in the high Sierras, 800 miles away, where snowbound New Hampshire is being simulated for certain sequences.

In the same company, incidentally, can be found Spencer Charters, one comedian who does not want to play Hamlet. Charters already has played the role.

Early in his career this veteran was a dramatic actor.

Reversed Roles
A musical show called "Blue Eyes" opened and closed the same week in 1919. The featured comedian was Olin Howland.

A chorus boy who had worked in at show introduced himself to Howland on the "Married a Doctor" set.

The chorus boy was Pat O'Brien star of the film, in which Howland played a minor role.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE E. JACOB

New York, Feb. 26 (AP)—Merchandise and specialty issues led a quiet recovery in today's stock market.

A renewal of yesterday's selling depressed the list fractions to 2 or more points in early dealings, but support was not long in arriving. Some of the utilities, oils and motors steadied. The activity, brisk at the start, dwindled on the rallying movement.

One of the conspicuous share gainers near the beginning of the fourth hour was Midland Steel Products, which added 3 points to its advance of Tuesday. Others, up as much as a point or more, included Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Macy, American Can, Continental Can, General Motors, Chrysler, National Cash Register, Seaboard Oil, Amerasia, Zenith Radio, Arnold Constable, Fajardo Sugar, U. S. Smelting, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Cerro de Pasco and Gimbel. Electric Power and Light was quite lively with a one point gain. Consolidated Gas, North American and American Water Works improved.

Among backward stocks were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Kennecott, Anaconda, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, International Nickel, Westinghouse and International Harvester. Bonds were irregular. Cotton and grains worked moderately higher. Foreign exchanges were easy in terms of the dollar.

Quotations given by Parker, McElroy & Co., members, N. Y. Stock Exchange, 120 Broadway, New York City; branch office, 282 Wall street.

Quotations at 2 o'clock.

Submitted Additional WPA Projects to Give Work to 100 More Men

Additional WPA projects which would afford work for 100 more men were submitted yesterday at a conference held in Albany between William B. Daley, WPA administrator of this district, and Mayor C. J. Heiseleman and city officials.

These additional projects are mostly for sewer and water main construction in Kingston. The additional men have been on the city relief rolls between May and November, but had been employed at seasonal work at the time the WPA began functioning here. They are now out of work and back on the relief rolls, but are eligible for WPA employment if there is sufficient work.

The projects submitted by Mayor Heiseleman were approved by Dr. Daley.

The question of WPA payrolls was also discussed and the mayor was assured that under plans being considered there would be no delay in the men receiving their pay on WPA projects.

Mayor Heiseleman was accompanied to Albany by City Engineer James Norton, Superintendent David Conway, of the board of public works; Superintendent Henry D. Darrow, of the water board; Max Reben of the FRB and Engineer Edward McCaffrey.

Hundreds Vacate Homes in Lowlands

Pittsburgh, Feb. 26 (AP)—Roaring flood waters from tributaries of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers today routed hundreds of families from their homes and inundated streets in many communities. Rescuers carried scores of people in rowboats from marooned homes in the lowlands. More than 100 families vacated their homes at Buena Vista, about 25 miles from Pittsburgh, after an ice gorge broke in Wild Cat creek. Throughout the night, volunteers aided women and children to higher ground, carrying household goods out of reach of rising waters. Flood warnings were sounded along the Ohio river south of Van Port, Pa., where the biggest ice gorge in the memory of rivermen has locked the stream. Near Canonsburg, Chartiers creek went on rampage, forcing 20 persons from their homes.

OLD MEXICAN PORT TAKES ON NEW LIFE

Acapulco on Schedule of Largest Liners.

Washington.—Gateway for countless galleons from the Orient 300 years ago, but almost ignored in modern times, Mexico's Rip van Winkle port, Acapulco, is now waking to renewed activity. The largest liners plying between New York and California plan to call there this year to drop tourists for Mexico City.

"Conveniently located below the shadow of Mexico's Pacific coast in the State of Guerrero, sleepy Acapulco has one of the finest natural harbors in the world," says the National Geographic society. "Yet it has drawn away a couple of centuries as a quiet little tropical town slumbering in the sun, in the bowl of great mountains that drop almost sheer into Acapulco bay."

"The town is a crescent of pastel-colored, adobe cubicles, topped by tiny patches of red tile roofs, and occasional green coconut palms. A few buildings, taller or broader, stand out from the mass of one-story dwellings—church, town hall and jail, covered market building, and a sprinkling of consulates and hotels. Little cotton mills, and soap and oil factories, operated intermittently, show that Acapulco once had industrial ambitions. The narrow winding streets are rarely crowded. Heat makes the air sultry, 'like hot fly-paper,' but visitors endure the climate to enjoy the town's tropical beauty."

Choked Its Progress.

"Behind it rise the steep, cactus-throated Sierra Madre, which have choked Acapulco's progress like fingers. There is no railroad to the interior, and less perfect harbors, such as Mazatlan and Manzanillo, have boomed because each has this advantage. So Acapulco has dreamed, 'When the railroad reaches here...'

"Cortes used its magnificent harbor in 1513, sending two brigantines on a voyage of exploration into the Gulf of California. But they reported no harbor equal to Acapulco's oval bay, nearly two miles wide. A hilly half-mile-wide peninsula between bay and ocean forms a natural breakwater, offering about four square miles of placid, almost land-locked shelter within earshot of Pacific breakers pounding against the rocky headlands outside."

"By 1550, trade at the port supported a little village, which the Spanish fortified with the grim gray fort of San Diego, still towering above one tip of the town. "The Aztec name for the settlement—Acapulco—'place where the reeds abound'—was borne on trade winds around the world. Galleons from the Far East brought fragrant cargoes of spices and silk, and from India, rich brocaded silks from Japan, exquisite porcelains from China. Occasional slave ships, charged with cargoes of negroes to work nearby sugar plantations, and legend claims that one brought a kidnapped princess, whose popularity is commemorated in the national Mexican girls' fiesta days, the China Poblana costume of green-bordered red skirt, loose white embroidered blouse, and gay shawl."

"Export of silver bullion and specie from Acapulco originated the strange custom, still existing, of calling pesos, often made in China and stamped 'Republica de Mexico,' 'Mexican dollars.' Sacked by Pirates. "From Acapulco, goods from the Orient journeyed inland over the tortuous, rocky 'Camino Real,' a brigand-infested mountain trail to Mexico, D. F., and thence to Vera Cruz for shipment to Spain. Transport was by strings of burros, or by slow or cars with thick solid wooden discs for wheels. Buccaneers heard of Acapulco's wealth, and inevitably the town was sacked by pirates and its ships captured when leaving the harbor. "There are only two seasons in Acapulco, both hot—steaming rainy summer and long parched winter. To 'air-condition' the town, an artificial lake was made through hills of the peninsula shielding it from the sea, and this 'Abra de San Nicolas' admits cooling westerly sea breezes. Many homes are built facing west. "A few years ago a modern highway was completed from Acapulco to Mexico, D. F., nearly 300 miles away and a mile and a half above sea level. Vacationists can sail to Acapulco, motor via picturesque Tasco and Cuernavaca to Mexico, D. F., and return to the United States by rail. Automobiles and buses now spin along the new route, which crosses and recrosses the old 'Camino Real,' formerly so difficult as to be a 'good road for ghosts.'"

Kingston, Reds Battle Tonight, Kendalls vs. Coeymans Teachers

The Jersey Reds, leaders of the American Basketball League, are the attraction at the Municipal Auditorium tonight against the Clites Service team of Frank Morgenweck, who is bound that his club must come through.

Morgie saw his tossers slip Sunday when they played the Reds at Union City, by the slight margin of 18-21. Although he was not wholly satisfied with the exhibition, he said his team showed up better than they had previously. Morgie thinks his courtiers can win tonight, and has high hopes of seeing them come through.

At present Kingston has a percentage of 38.4 in the league standing, being tied with Pasadena, and Philadelphia. Each of these clubs has won five and lost eight games in the last half of the American.

The Reds are one of the roughest and toughest teams in the American loop. They are not afraid to elbow their way through, and a skrimish here and there during the games is nothing unusual. The last time they appeared here, Corky Stanton came out of the fray with a black eye. He got it in a mixup with Willie Schriff. The Jersey boy said he didn't mean it. It was his elbow, he thought that struck the Schriff. That was unintentionally. That was Schriff's story, but from the press table it looked as though Willie tossed a straight right, clipping Stanton under the eye. Corky was kayned and had to leave the game.

Tonight's tussle should be rougher than any the Reds have played here this season. They are out to win. A loss tonight would do them no good in their climb for the second honors which will be theirs if they continue to play the sort of ball that has brought them into first place.

Besides Schriff, the Reds have on their roster Paulie Adamo, Mitchell, Al Benson, Moe Spahn and Moe Frankel.

Kingston has Kintzing, Kurtyka, Hearn, Huxia, Wyka, Shimek and Pelkington, the new center Morgenweck has signed.

Starting time of tonight's game is 9:30, instead of the usual earlier hour. The change was made in favor of those desiring to attend Lenten services first.

The preliminary will be between the Kendalls and the highly-touted Coeymans High School Faculty Five. The teachers have won 16 straight so far, which means that the Kendalls are in for a tough session. The roster of the visiting club contains the names of Roy Pitkin, Syracuse University; Roy White, St. Lawrence; Chel Baltz, Coeymans; Rem Furlong, St. Lawrence; Bill Jones, St. Lawrence and Tommy Kunz, Little Falls, ex-state lacquer.

How Indians Tanned Hides

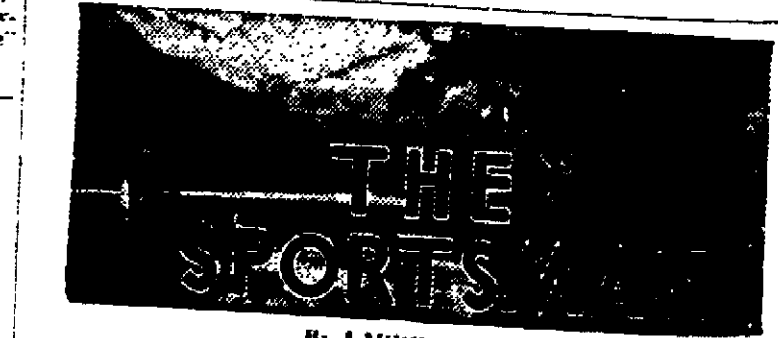

One process used by the Indians in tanning deer hides was first to scrape off all fat and flesh adhering to the pelt. Then the fat and brains of the deer would be rubbed into the flesh side and the skin rinsed out in water repeatedly. It was a long and tedious process to create a really fine piece of buckskin, states a writer in the Detroit News, but the Indians didn't mind for they had plenty of time on their hands and, anyway, the squaws did most of the work. Two kinds of buckskin were created: one was white and the other smoke-tanned. The last was repeatedly smoked during the tanning process over a small fire with plenty of smoke. After many weeks of labor the hide would be ready for fashioning in garments.

While "cigarette money" may be small change to the average Canadian, the amount spent on tobacco in the Dominion as a whole during a year is a very substantial sum and supports an industry of major importance.

A "walking" machine, designed to test the wearing qualities of the upper portion of women's shoes, has been developed and placed in operation at the national bureau of standards, Washington.

FRAGMENTARY reports from the fringes of the great white silence indicate upland game birds have suffered heavy losses in their fight for existence against the coldest winter in years.

Any definite estimate is impossible until spring because much country after the first heavy snows and cold waves. Weakened birds are easy victims of predators.

From Wisconsin come reports of game birds dying through failure to obtain grit in their diet because of deep snow. They couldn't get down to sand and gravel. Game officials said dead birds were found with their crops full of unground food, and they appealed to sportsmen and farmers to add grit to their feeding program.

Waterfowl suffer, too. In February, 1935, suffered in the frigid temperature. During the week in February, 20,000 ducks were reported starving and freezing on slough lands at Thornton, Idaho. Residents were puzzled as to why the ducks did not go south in the fall, saying it was the first time they recall that the birds attempted to winter there.

When the Lake of the Ozarks in central Missouri froze over for the first time, numerous ducks took to the shore and a ration of acorns. The Mississippi river froze from bank to bank at St. Louis. Wild fowl were without much open water in other sections where straggling flocks stood.

Game laws were laid for quail and too plentiful now in northern states. Whole coveys have been found frozen. Bobwhite can't take it in winter weather when food is scarce.

Entertainment by Industrial Girls

A most successful entertainment was presented by the Industrial Girls' Club of the Y. W. C. A. on Monday evening before a capacity audience. The first part of the program a minstrel show on the theme "School Days" with R. A. Oberhaus in the role of old-fashioned school teacher, and John Huener and Milton Shlehel as the two "bad boys," each presenting a comedy song number.

Members of the club took the part of the pupils, most of whom proved to be rather troublesome to the teacher. Those having the solo parts were the Misses Bertha Slicker, Sally Gage, Mae Benson, Regina Sinsabaugh, Rose Misove, Edna Buchanan and Marion Oberhaus, while the following were also in the cast: The Misses Evelyn Smith, Rita Sapp, Ruth Bell, Joyce Gerlach, Florence Slicker, Betty Hyatt, Anna Smith, Kathleen Burns, Frances Gage, Santa Martino. The whole act had many amusing jokes and the soloists all received hearty encores from the appreciative audience.

The second part of the program consisted of a miniature dance review under the direction of Miss Ottilia Riccobono, with Miss Bertha Slicker as master of ceremonies. The four talking dolls were particularly clever in their song and tap number. The Misses Mae Benson, Betty Hyatt, Florence Slicker and Anna Smith taking the parts of the dolls. Miss Mabel Brewer also gave a solo dance and was joined on the chorus by four Tri-Hi Club girls, the Misses Marjorie Tease, Priscilla Nolan, Helen Flicker, Helen Ross, while Miss Frances Gage entertained with a Dutch clog dance. One of the most attractive number was "Tell Me That You Love Me," sung very pleasingly by Mrs. Regina Sinsabaugh while the Misses Sally Gage and Edna Buchanan did a graceful waltz. Two tap numbers followed, a trio by the Misses Kathleen Burns, Santa Martino and Rita Sapp, and a solo dance by Miss Ruth Britt, and the act concluded with a finale number by the entire cast. Those taking part in the dancing chorus were the Misses Evelyn Smith, Bertha Slicker, Frances Gage, Edna Buchanan, Sally Gage, Regina Sinsabaugh, Kathleen Burns, Santa Martino and Rita Sapp. Mrs. R. J. Cole played for the minstrel show while Miss Riccobono played for her act.

CAPITAL NEWS

HOLLISTER STURGES, Jr.

Albany, Feb. 26 (Special) — Republican senators fought in vain yesterday to force through an amendment to the unemployment insurance law, requiring that the bill passed last year when the Democratic party had full control of both houses of the legislature be repealed should the Supreme Court of the United States declare unconstitutional the federal law designed for the same purpose.

The state law becomes operative the first of March. Meanwhile labor leaders are looking to Washington to see what the fate of the federal bill is to be.

Speared head of the attack was in the form of George R. Fearon, of Syracuse, who declared that some 7,000 business establishments had quit New York state for others where taxes were less.

He cried out that if there are no employers left in the state there will be no jobs for employees and pointed that in his opinion the very purpose of the law would defeat itself.

"When you penalize the employer of New York you penalize the employee," he warned. "One cannot get along without the other. This amendment is to maintain New York as an industrial state with all others."

He pointed out that Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania had taken care of themselves by not passing similar legislation.

"The fellows that you are hurting with the law are the 500,000 family heads now on relief," Senator Fearon added, "you are just postponing the day when they'll get jobs."

William T. Byrne, veteran Democrat of Albany, took up the defense of the Democratic majority. He was author of the unemployment insurance bill last year, as was Fearon the author of the amendment to curtail it.

"This is the old-fashioned fight between property and human rights," he exploded, and for half an hour he belittled his convictions into the ears of all those within range.

He described the Democratic party as the one that considered people above property and insisted that the Republican mind was one of a mental vacuum on humanity.

With pride he emphasized the belief that "New York has the most magnificent labor laws in the world," and added, "I don't mean maybe!"

Byrne pounded his desk to drive home the points he was making, and he slapped his hip at each mention of "pocket-preference" which he hurled time and again at the Republicans.

In defense of industry quitting the state he asserted that once it was settled elsewhere it was not long before labor got its foothold in and the wage scales went up.

"And now the Republican party comes in the Senate and shows how it stands for property over human rights," went on the Albany Democrat, "they started the ball rolling under the leadership of Al Smith and crushed out of Republican hearts the undying and never-to-be repealed labor laws. Long after we have melted into dust will unborn billions thank forward-looking legislators in New York for the liberation of their souls."

"New York is honest to labor, and has no room for the chiseler. We keep marching on, handicapped with the Republicans on our backs."

A cross-fire of statistics between Byrne and Fearon followed, each defending former arguments.

As a follow-up during the afternoon G. O. P. members of the public relief and welfare committee in the Assembly took the cue of the senators and at each opportunity questioned state and county officials as to what causes were underlying for present unemployment and in their opinions what if any industries had marched out of the state.

There were sufficient answers showing that industries from points all over the state had left in quest of less expensive places to carry out operations to encourage Republicans to hope for an overthrow of the new labor law which puts an added financial burden on industry: the unemployment insurance law. It has frequently been referred to as the "2 per cent payroll tax."

True Story From the Conservation Commissioner's office comes a tragic story that began 25 years ago when the late Thomas Mott Osborne, father of Lithgow Osborne, present commissioner, began action on behalf of the state to recover for a breach of warranty. Yesterday the commissioner signed stipulation papers which settled the case.

Although a compromise case the state made a profit of $270,000 plus interest.

ture was seen when Speaker Irving M. Ives announced that after Monday, March 2, no more local bills would be introduced in the Assembly.

This is usually done when adjournment is expected within three or four weeks so that committee may clear up pending measures before the rules committee takes over all legislation 10 days before final adjournment.

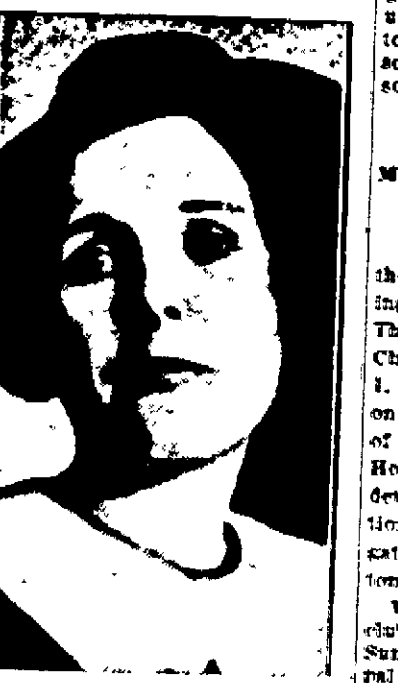

However, local matters can still be introduced in the Senate by an assemblyman's upper house legislator.

New Nomenclature Instead of expressing a certain class of employees as "white collar workers" Assemblyman Arthur Swartz, of Erie, offered an original expression of "collar and the workers." His remark brought a good deal of comment.

Personal Senator Arthur H. Wicks was an interested spectator at the Assembly hearing on unemployment relief. He is author of the TERA bill which was discussed yesterday afternoon.

County Attorney Roccoe V. Elsworth and County Clerk Fred Stang of Ulster county visited the capital Tuesday.
